

- [-]  Substance Abuse Counselor

- [-]  Version 1.0

- [-]  Scope

- [-]  P389104: Substance abuse counselors are behavioral health professionals who specialize in substance abuse prevention, treatment, and rehabilitation. Behavioral health professionals who work in this area include clinical psychologists (PhD or PsychD), social workers, marriage and family therapists, and licensed professional counselors. The scope of privileges includes the evaluation, diagnosis, and treatment of individuals with substance abuse issues utilizing a variety of behavioral health therapies and approaches. They perform consultation and refer patients with additional behavioral health and medical needs to appropriate resources.

- [-]  Diagnosis and Management (D&M):

- [-]  Army providers must select one of the following two choices:

- [-]  P389106: Supervised level: Social workers who have not yet achieved independent licensure, licensed professional counselors/mental health counselors who do not meet DoD and Service qualifications for independent practice, and clinical psychologists or marriage and family therapists who have not achieved substance abuse certification will work under a plan of supervision tailored to their training and competence.

- [-]  P389108: Independent level: Clinical psychologists, social workers who have independent licensure (LCSW), and marriage and family therapists may provide services independently once they have achieved certification in substance abuse. Masters level providers with licensure as a licensed professional counselor/mental health counselor who meet DoD requirements for independent practice and who have substance abuse certification may also practice independently.
